Tuesday poem #404 : Kimberly Alidio : I marry myself to a mountain tonight, the one I'm on at the lit wood stove, I think of an elegant poet collected in one of the O Books anthologies his cabin in the mountains, the play of mosquitos remember to research the earthships Cid has duck terrine and babkas! believe all the Subaru our cabin plumes, the farmer in his hot tub near the frozen creek, a woman slipped her tour group exclaimed several loud sightings

a fire for the painter, silver smith, seller of blue corn fry bread plank bridges, hay for a dog bed acequia irrigated by orphaned brothers broken into sweats, sinews acreage stilled

 all the artists humor before the wars a few degrees down the round valley, few in plena poetry all day long...

robust with pats of butter a milagro leg, amazonite, slipknots striated white smoke, alpine glow? no, alpenglow my wood fire readied for going out whole kindling in innocent positions
